

Hockey Academy Davos

The Davos Hockey Club’s hockey academy has set a goal to finance a professional youth academy that can exist independently of the success of the professional team. Using an endowment for financing, the club will use earnings to hire top-class coaches and trainers to support talented youth in their education. The earnings will also go to house the young players.

The Katadyn Group sees sport as an important part of character development. In addition to offering opportunities to keep the body healthy, sport teaches people how to handle victory and defeat, dedication, discipline, consideration, fairness and goal-setting, just to name a few things. For these reasons, the Katadyn Group helped create the endowment and takes part in the endowment council. Because this is a long-term project, the Katadyn Group plans to support the hockey academy through a yearly contribution.

Update

In line with the development of the academy, the Katadyn Group has agreed to be the helmet sponsor for the Davos Hockey Club’s development team for the next three years. This is also an effort to support junior sports on its own and not combined with the success of the professional teams, thus working to ensure long-term success for the hockey academy.

Sports fans will see the Katadyn logo displayed behind the nets during every home game.
